Steel and Tran are in a virtual deadlock now

Election Day is stretching into Election Weeks, as the vote count continues by the Orange County Registrar of Voters.

The most-viewed races include two Congressional seats and several posts on local boards and councils.

As of closing time on Friday at the county registrar's office, Dave Min, a Democrat, continues to hold on to a 9,000-vote edge over Republican Scott Baugh in the 47th District contest for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. News organizations have "called" this race for Min.

Election 2024

In the 45th District race, the two candidates – Republican incumbent Michelle Steel and Democratic challenger Derek Tran – are locked in a virtual tie. Steel has a slim 88-vote lead over him, but there are still about 34,000 votes remaining to be counted.

Steel has the edge in Orange County, but the district takes in part of Los Angeles County (the Cerritos area) and votes from that area have almost

Judge Backs Voter ID Rule in Hunt. Bch

State atty. general to persist

An Orange County judge has rejected a lawsuit by the State of California seeking to block Huntington Beach from enforcing a voter ID law approved by voters.

The Associated Press is reporting that Superior Court Judge Nico Dourbetas issued a ruling Friday saying that there was no state law banning a city from requiring that voters show identification when casting ballots in person.

"It's a massive black eye to the State of California," said Michael Gates, Huntington Beach's city attorney," adding that "Huntington Beach is not going to be intimidated or deterred."

California Attorney General Rob Bonfa's office claimed that Friday's decision "doesn't address the merits of the case" and the "voter ID policy clearly conflicts with state law."

Surf City voters approved the voter ID rules in March, rules that will go into effect in 2026. The city is considered likely to then conduct its municipal elections separate from the Orange County Registrar of Voters.

Man arrested for 'hate' and sex crime by WPD

A Westminster man has been arrested on charges of sexual battery and hate crime.

According to WPD Commander Michael Harvey, the arrest of Aaron Aubrey Navies, 32, stemmed from an incident on Nov. 8.

At around 7:42 a.m. on that day, a 43-year-old female resident of Garden Grove was in a retail store in Westminster in the 13500 block of Beach Boulevard.

When she reached down to pick up an item, the suspect allegedly – without provocation and against her will – grabbed her buttocks with both of his hands.

She stood up, threw an item at the suspect and backed away. Navies allegedly said, "You don't have rights because you're Mexican and I can do what I want."

The victim called the police and the arrest was made.

• Garden Grove City Council, District 6: Ariana Arestegui leads Tri Lam by 221 votes.

■ GARDEN GROVE SCHOOL BOARD

Consolidating special ed at Mark Twain wins approval

On a 5-0 vote the Garden Grove Unified School District Board of Education on Tuesday night approved a proposal to consolidate two special education projects at an expanded Mark Twain School.

The board concurred with plans to move students with “moderate to severe” special needs from the Jordan Adult Transition Program (18 to 21 years old) and the Special Education Center at Mark Twain serving preschool to adults (until age 22) with exceptional medical needs into a facility at the latter school that will include the addition of classrooms, office spaces, play courts and an expanded parking area.

The school is located at 11802 Loara St., north of Chapman Avenue.

The change is reported to become necessary because – according to a staff report – the adult transition program at Jordan has exceeded its capacity and has used locations at the comprehensive high schools in the GGUSD, the Lincoln Education Center and at Mark Twain as overflow campuses.

Additionally, the change would “provide a more centralized location with room for growth to our neediest special education students and their families.”

The GGUSD serves most of Garden Grove as well as parts of Anaheim, Cypress, Fountain Valley, Santa Ana, Stanton and Westminster.

Yes, it's already looking a lot like Christmas

Have you seen that TV commercial – I think it was for Mercedes Benz – in which a family is riding in a car and there's some disagreement about when it's the right time to listen to Christmas music on the radio?

I had to smile, because I await the return of holiday tunes like a dog waiting for dinner. Impatient and then, finally, silly happy. But in a dignified way.

The same thing with the approach of Thanksgiving, marked by the re-appearance of pumpkin spice coffee drinks at Starbucks, and probably at every other joint that serves hot caffeine beverages. I think if someone could figure out a way to inject pumpkin spice into novocaine you'd see a spike in visits to the dentist in October and November.

Regardless of our age, I think most people react emotionally to these harbingers of the seasons.

The debut of "back-to-school" supplies at Target and Walmart bring smiles to parents and frowns to kids (and probably a lot of teachers, too).

On the other hand, the coming of fall signals not just a return to the classroom, but also the start of football season, a kind of 18-week holiday that brings people together in support of their local team, especially if it covers the spread.

But Christmas ... that touches the heart in a way that no other part of the calendar does. Regardless of your faith – or no faith – it has the ability to take you back to the much simpler time of your youth, when you had no responsibilities and you

City will study rent control

To study mobile home rules in Anaheim and SJC

Are rents too high for mobile home residents? Should a city seek to put a lid on what landlords can charge?

On Tuesday the Stanton City Council agreed to open an inquiry into the topic. Councilmember Donald Torres suggested that the issue be considered and it was agreed to bring before the council at a later meeting for review and discussion the existing ordinances of Anaheim and San Juan Capistrano.

In other action, the council:

Biden is Pushing Aid to Ukraine

Aiming to support Kyiv in struggle against Russia

In its last two months in office, the Biden Administration will be sending increased aid to Ukraine to defend itself from Russian armed forces.

According to the Associated Press, "President Biden has committed to making sure that every dollar we have at our disposal will be pushed out the door between now and Jan. 20," when President-elect Donald Trump is due to be sworn in," said Secretary of State Antony Blinken.

The move comes because of uncertainty over what President-elect Donald Trump and the new ARMAMENTS SHIPPED TO Ukraine from the U.S and Europe.

Republican Congress will do regarding the years-long conflict between the two nations.

It's now mired in a general standoff, partially because of billions in military aid from the U.S. and Europe, which have "leveled the playing field" between the two nations.

N. Dakota gov. picked as Interior sec'y

Doug Burgum, governor of North Dakota, will be trading in his current job for two, perhaps three new jobs. The Republican has been nominated by President-elect Donald Trump to serve as Secretary of the Interior and chair of the new National Energy Council.

"This council will oversee the path to U.S. ENERGY DOMINANCE by cutting red tape, enhancing private sector investments across all sectors of the Economy, and by focusing on INNOVATION over longstanding, but totally unnecessary, regulation," wrote Trump in a social media post, according to The New York Times.

He will also have a seat on the National Security Council.

'Well-off' predicted to spur a holiday spending surge

With rising prices an issue in the recent presidential election, will consumers spend less this holiday season, more, or about the same? According to United Press International, retail analysts are predicting a boom overall in sales this fall and winter.

The claim is that good economic growth in the past few months will be a bigger factor in consumer decisions than the cost of gifts and celebrating the season.

But not in all cases. The divide between those doing well may mean that while holiday shopping may increase by as much as 7 percent over 2023, much of that increase will come from consumers earning more than $65,000 annually.

They are expected to spend an estimated $3,000 on gifts, entertaining and travel, compared to the average shopping spending close to half of that, at $1,638.

We're in for more of that good autumn sweater weather in our West Orange County cities for a while. The forecast for Saturday is for a daytime high of 67 with an overnight low of 45. Sunday will warm slightly to 69 (48) and Monday to cool to 66 (46). Tuesday should continue the up-and-down pattern at 68 (48). Sunny skies should be in place Saturday and Sunday, followed by partly cloudy skies on Monday and Tuesday.

An Hysterical 'Carol' at GWC

Kick off the holiday season with this gem

By Thom deMartino
Orange County Tribune

A perfect introduction to the Christmas season, Golden West College and director Tom Amen present their newest production at the GWC Mainstage Theater, "Inspecting Carol." Rather than a rehash of the Charles Dickens holiday classic, "Carol" weaves the story of the trials and tribulations of an acting troupe staging the beloved work ... with a few, er, minor tweaks.

The story opens in the meager little Soapbox Playhouse in Lincoln, Nebraska to the roaring guitar licks of Jimi Hendrix's "Purple Haze", as the sound engineer rocks out in the minutes before rehearsal, while exasperated stage manager M.J. McMann (Michelle Terrill) implores him to dial it down a notch.

In stumbles Wayne Wallace (William Logan), saying he's an actor (non-union), just travelling the country to "follow his bliss!", and looking to find a place with the company. Unimpressed, M.J. summarily dismisses him as the colorful director (and founding member of the theater) Zorah Bloch (Carrie Vinikow) and other cast members meander in for the rehearsal.

There's the lively young Luther Beatty (Harrison Terrill), playing Tiny Tim; the affable husband and wife team of Sidney Carton (Scott Keister) and Dorothy Hapgood (Judy Gish), cast as the ghost of Jacob Marley and Mrs. Cratchit respectively; the infatuated Phil Hewlitt (Jack Clark), fixated on Zorah as he plays Bob Cratchit; Bart Francis (Nicholas Elder), performing in multiple roles; Walter E. Parsons (Eric Davis), as the company's first African-American actor, dismayed at playing the three Christmas ghosts ("Why's it got to be a white hand?" he asks, regarding the bony, skeletal hand of the ghost of Christmas future); and Larry Vauxhall (Lawrence Hemingway), the prima donna actor playing Ebenezer Scrooge, who constantly wants to re-interpret the scripts to put his own – generally unwanted – spin on the characters he portrays.

JUDY GISH, WILLIAM LOGAN and Scott Keister in "Inspecting Carol."

Stage Review

The histrionic Zorah already has enough challenges to contend with – her husband passing away the previous year, moody actors to deal with, the show opening in four days – but when Kevin Emery (Matt Koutroulis), the company's financial director tells her they've fallen well short of the 4000 subscribers the theater needs to keep head above water, she's in a panic. For the last 12 years it's been this holiday show that's kept them in the black, and with finances drying up, they're almost flat broke.

Add to this that the National Endowment for the Arts has pulled its funding, leaving the group in even more dire straits: the only bright spot being that the NEA will be sending an evaluator to review their production – and if convinced by the show, will release their funding. If only they could finesse the evaluator, if only they knew who it was!

When in walks the ill-timed Wayne again... and so the hijinks begin.

While GWC director Tom Amen may be renowned for the dramatic works he's staged at the Mainstage Theater – "Dracula," "The Pillowman," "Hamlet" and "On the Exhale," for instance – it's refreshing to see some of the familiar faces from previous shows working their magic in a comedic production... especially one as fantastic and side-splittingly entertaining as this.

Vinikow's vivacious, frenetic ("I'm Lithuanian!") Zorah,

Great: ★★★★★

Michelle Terrill's entertaining, high-strung M.J., and the duo of Keister and Gish as the eager Sidney and Dorothy all enchant the audience, as does the young Mr. Terrill as Luther and Logan's bumbling, inspired Wayne; Clark's smitten, jealous Phil, Koutroulis's anxious Kevin and Davis's frustrated Walter, charm; and Hemingway's brilliant turn as the over-the-top, bombastic Larry (after so many dramatic roles at the Mainstage Theater) all bring the show to a hysterical, comedic crescendo for the viewer (and bonus points to Amanda MacDonald and her regal turn as Betty Andrews in the latter half of the show.)

A phenomenal comedy gem, reflecting the ins-and-outs of the actors' trade, "Inspecting Carol" is a must-see: and with only one weekend left to see it, it's one to

Put them in, coach; it's the right thing

You see them on the sidelines at a football game, their uniforms still laundry-clean after three quarters. Or on the bench ... the far end of the bench in the basketball gym ... gazing up at the scoreboard and clock, doing the math in their heads.

Are we far enough ahead (or behind) that Coach might give us some playing time? Maybe?

Hope so ...

To anyone who's paid a bit of attention to the changes that have come to sports in the last decade, it should be obvious that the people described above – male or female – may be the last vestige of true athleticism in the whole wild wide world of sports.

These are the folks who play the game for the enjoyment, the camaraderie, the experience of playing. They are loyal to their team and its glory, even though they won't make it into the broadcast or sports page.

From high school on up, the more-gifted athletes often gravitate to the "bigger, better deal." Prep stars – especially in football and basketball – switch schools (or try to) like most of us change our socks if they think it will benefit their careers.

In college ... well, here's what UCLA basketball coach Mike Cronon said, as quoted by Ben Bloch in the L.A. Times. "There's really only one rule: You can transfer every year. So who the hell knows [what will happen] next spring? Who knows? And then you sign early now, it used to be binding, now it's just an aid thing. Chargers, Mariners Roll On

Lobos, Oilers, Aztecs finish memorable years

And now there are two.

After CIF-SS quarterfinal games on Thursday and Friday, just two high school football teams from our West Orange County area will still be playing in the semifinal round this coming week.

Edison High (8-4) won its game over Bonita 24-0 in Division 3 play on Friday, while Pacifica (7-5) beat The Brentwood School 27-23 in D-10 on Friday.

Seeing their seasons end were Huntington Beach (7-5), which lost to 45-14 to Summit in D-5 play and La Quinta (8-4) falling 27-20 to Pioneer in D-14 action. On Thursday, Los Amigos (11-1) fell 40-20 to El Rancho in a Division 11 quarterfinal.

In Edison's win, Julius Gillick rushed for one score and Sam Thomson passed for two more to lead the Chargers, who will play Vista Murrieta in the semifinals.

Pacifica won its seventh consecutive game in part because of three interceptions. The M's will play St. Anthony of Long Beach next.

Brady Edmunds threw for two scores in the Oilers' loss. HBHS trailed 21-14 at halftime, but the offense was silent in the second half.

season had an imperfect second half at Monsoor Stadium in its game and suffered a 40-20 loss to El Rancho High of Pico Rivera.

For the first half, the Lobos and Dons were closely matched, each team answering the other with scores. At one point, the orange-and-black led 20-14 and the teams went into the locker rooms at halftime with El Rancho leading 21-20, the difference being an unsuccessful PAT.

The second half was a different story. Los Amigos (11-1) suffered from a run of three turnovers and El Rancho converted those into the victory that now propelled them to the semifinals.

Lakers, Ducks win; Clippers beaten

The Los Angeles Lakers defeated the San Antonio Spurs 120-115 on Friday night, led by 40 points by Anthony Davis and 16 rebounds by LeBron James.

Six players scored in double figures for the visitors. Austin Reaves had 19 points, James had 15, Dalton Knecht and D'Angelo Russell 13 and Gabe Vincent 11.

With the win, the Lakers are 7-4, are in sixth place in the NBA Western Conference and have won four games in a row.

Clips clipped in Houston

Suffering their third loss in a row, the Los Angeles Clippers were beaten 125-104 on the road by the Houston Rockets. James Harden scored 21 points, grabbed six rebounds and has two assists.

The Clips, now 6-7, fell behind by 20 points by halftime and could never close the gap. They are now 10th in the NBA Western Conference.

Ducks rally to beat Wings

After trailing 3-1, the Anaheim Ducks rallied with four consecutive goals and went on to beat the Red Wings 6-4 in Detroit.

Goals were scored for the Ducks by Olen Zellweger, Trevor Zebras, Troy Terry, Cutter Cauthier, Ross Johnson and Ryan Strome.

Kicks aren't enough for the Rams now

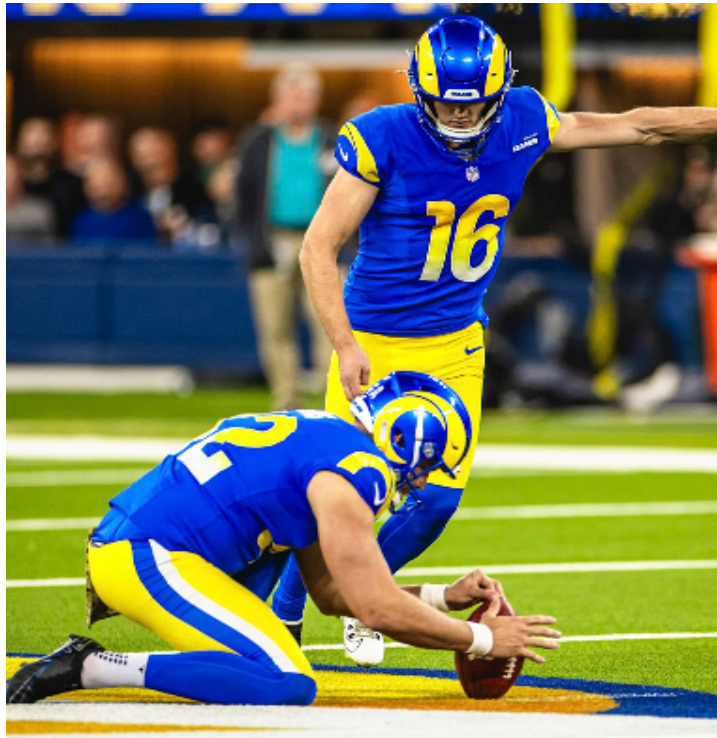

Offense stuttered against Dolphins; Pats a must-win

By Greg Beacham
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Just when the Los Angeles Rams' offense appeared to be finding its stride, Matthew Stafford's group took an embarrassing pratfall in prime time.

It's too soon to know what that means for the Rams' playoff chances, but a big regression in an eminently winnable home game is not ideal for coach Sean McVay and his up-and-down team.

The Rams (4-5) have rarely done anything halfway during McVay's largely successful tenure, and their offensive missteps in a 23-15 loss to the Miami Dolphins on Monday night were a dramatic downturn — particu-cess rate in the red zone, scoring on just 46.9% of their trips. Stafford missed an open Williams on the most egregious red zone failure, but the Rams' season-long problems in that area reveal issues with both McVay's play-calling and Stafford's usually ample playmaking acumen.

"It was just negative plays at the wrong times," said Stafford, who went 32 of 46 for 293 yards while failing to throw a TD pass for the fourth time in nine games this season. "Whether it's a turnover, a sack, an inefficient play on first down or whatever it was, we shot ourselves in the foot in that strike-zone area, 30-yard line-ish area. That was probably the difference in the game, and not coming up with touchdowns."

The Rams were in prime position to pad their record over the next month with three games against struggling franchises, but they promptly blew their chance to beat the Dolphins, who had one win since Week 1. The Rams will face New England (3-7) and New Orleans (3-7) on the road in the next three weeks, and both games loom large for Los Angeles to have any chance at the postseason. What's working

The Rams' young defensive front thrived in the Monday night spotlight: Nose tackle Kobie Turner had six tackles, four pressures and a sack, while star rookie Jared Verse had five tackles and forced a fumble that he recovered while sacking Tua Tagovailoa.

The front has led the Rams' dramatic defensive improvement over the past four week.

What needs help

The Rams are down to 26th in larly because they occurred after two impressive outings against Minnesota and Seattle.

"I do have belief in these guys," McVay said. "We're all in this thing together. We've got to be able to look at it and we've got to consistently figure out what's the best way to put our guys in the right kinds of spots, and trying to be able to figure out some sort of semblance of an identity."

The Rams' month of momentum abruptly ended with the offense failing to reach the end zone for only the second time in four seasons with Stafford in uniform. Los Angeles' offensive line didn't look sharp, Stafford wasn't exceptionally accurate, Kyren Williams didn't break any big runs, and no receivers could make a big play in the red zone.

It added up to five field goals by rookie Joshua Karty — actually six, but rookie Beaux Limmer's false start erased a 52-yard make that was followed by a 57-yard miss — and a night of frustration.

The Rams have dropped to 30th in the league in touchdown suc-the league with a measly 94.1 yards rushing per game.

That's unacceptable for a team with a running back of Williams' caliber — along with promising rookie Blake Corum, who has only 80 yards on just 23 carries in nine games.

The offensive line also deserves some blame for why the Rams are passing on roughly 60% of McVay's plays, ranking LA in the top quarter of the NFL.

Stock up

Linebacker Christian Rozeboom has looked like a weak link for most of the season, but he starred against the Dolphins with his second career interception and two pass breakups. Undrafted rookie Omar Speights also looked solid at inside linebacker, making eight tackles.

Stock down

The Rams signed Colby Parkinson from Seattle on a three-year, $22.5 million deal last spring, but he has been supplanted as Los Angeles' top tight end by Davis Allen, a fifth-round pick in 2023. Parkinson got just 11 snaps against Miami, while Allen was in for 56 snaps. Parkinson has 23 catches for 214 yards on 36 targets this season, and he had at least one glaring drop while his role declined in recent weeks.

Injuries

The Rams reported no new injuries after the game. Offensive linemen Steve Avila and Jonah Jackson played every snap in their returns from long-term injury absences, but both still looked rusty. Joe Noteboom played right tackle in a return from long-term injury, and he appeared to struggle in Rob Havenstein's spot.

Key number

Demarcus Robinson had just one catch on five targets against the Dolphins after he caught two TD passes in each of the Rams' past two games. Tutu Atwell barely played and had just one catch. Stafford is right to rely heavily on Cooper Kupp and Puka Nacua, but spreading the ball to his other two capable receivers seems smart.

Next steps

The Rams travel cross-country Sunday for what seems like a must-win game in Foxborough, Massachusetts, if Los Angeles hopes to stay in the thick of contention.
