Voter Registrar Invited For Another View?

Bob Page might rebut claims of widespread election fraud, errors

By Jim Tortolano
Orange County Tribune

After a hearing a presentation from a spokesperson from a group that claims widespread election fraud and error, the Huntington Beach City Council will consider on Tuesday extending an invitation to the Orange County Registrar of Voters to address the council on voter security.

Mayor Pat Burns and Councilmember Butch Twining are proposing the invitation.

In an "issue statement," the two wrote that they have "received countless e-mails requesting that the Huntington Beach City Council ask Bob Page, the Orange County Registrar of Voters, to address concerns about voting security in Orange County and Huntington Beach." Those topics would include voter identification, election administration and efforts to prevent voter fraud.

At the last council meeting a spokesperson from

Huntington Beach voters have voted to require identification from voters and limited the number of “drop-off” voting boxes. ## Looking at the 'heros' with an honest view

Was Christopher Columbus a hero or a heel?

The question of honoring him in October with Columbus Day, or replacing it with Indigenous People Day was discussed at Tuesday's meeting of the Garden Grove City Council.

First, some historical facts. Columbus did not discover America as we think of it. His ships banged into some islands which he thought were off the coast of India.

Retorts

Jim Tortolano

His geographical "whoops" did lead to the Europeanization of the Western Hemisphere, the product of which was slaughter, subjugation and the discovery of immense wealth.

The native peoples were subject to many cruelties and violence by the "white man." But, to be totally fair and accurate, the "natives" – especially the Aztecs – had been cruel and violent to each other while taking each other's land for centuries.

There's not even much certainty that the natives were "native" in the sense that they were there first. There's some evidence that there's a connection between the Asiatic people and the "natives" to which we now refer. It may be that the "natives" conquered an earlier people.

Columbus was brave and dedicated, but also cruel and selfish. Thusly, he has been demoted from the pantheon of "good guys."

And rightly so. But many of the venerated had darker sides. Mohandas Gandhi was a great spiritual leader and a founder of Indian independence, but

'Stop Where You Are,' Says Trump

Russia, Ukraine told to end their war over land

The battling nations of Russia and Ukraine were told to "stop where they are" to end their war by President Donald Trump after a meeting Friday in the White House with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky.

According to the Associated Press, the president made this post on his Truth Social: "Enough blood has been shed, its property lines being defined by War and Guts. They should stop where they are. Let both claim victory, let History decide."

THE WAR BETWEEN Russia and Ukraine has been going on for three years (Shutterstock).

He added, "You go by the line wherever it is – otherwise it's too complicated."

That would mean Russia being allowed to keep territory in southeastern Ukraine it now oc-

The New York Times reported Friday that he felt that Santos, who was serving a sentence of 10 years, was "horribly mistreated."

Santos will have served less than three months of his 87-month sentence after being convicted of wire fraud and aggravated identify theft. He also won't have to pay the restitution he was ordered to make of about $376,000 to victims of his actions.

When many falsehoods were exposed, he was indicted by the State of New York and expelled from the House of Representatives in 2023.

Spellbinding 'Diviners' At GWC

At Mainstage
Theatre through Sunday in HB

By Thom deMartino
Orange County Tribune

Some things are just destined – regardless of the choices we make.

“The Diviners,” written by Jim Leonard Jr., has opened at the Mainstage Theater at Golden West College for a limited time. Directed by Tom Amen, it tells the story of a special young man and his family during the Great Depression, and the kindly lapsed preacher that wanders into their lives, as well as their tiny midwestern town of Zion.

The audience is introduced to Buddy Layman (Justin Callisch), a simple-minded young man with a terribly complicated relationship with water. Having nearly drowned in his youth, Buddy is terrified of it, and immensely sensitive regarding it: to the degree that he can even detect water below the earth through “divining” – using a forked stick to determine where to dig a well.

His sister Jennie Mae (Hannah Belle Owens) and father Ferris (Scott Keister) have grown accustomed to the boy’s strange ways – including his refusal to bathe, and speaking of himself in the third person. But when the wandering former preacher C.C. Showers (Luke Brodowski) comes to town looking for work, he immediately strikes up a friendship with the odd young man.

Ferris, a mechanic, gives C.C. a job so he can remain in the town: but not only has C.C. caught the interest of Jennie Mae, but also the local religious folk: including the pious Norma Henshaw (Kim Brown), her niece Darlene (Emily Bolden), Luella Bennett (Carrie Vinikow), wife to farmer Basil Bennett (Phil Brickley) and JUSTIN CALLISCH and Hannah Belle Owens in “the Diviners” at Golden West College.

Stage Review

Goldie Short (Judy Gish), owner of the town diner.

In this tiny burg of only forty residents, word gets around: and despite his determination to distance himself from his former vocation, the townsfolk keep pushing C.C. to take on the job as the new preacher – much to his irritation.

But his friendship with the young diviner deepens, as the young man opens up about how his mother drowned, and the pair talk about heaven and where Buddy’s mom is now: for while C.C. might insist he is no longer in the family business of preaching, he is indeed still a man of faith who looks to give comfort to the boy.

Can this friendship transform the wounded son, or will it lead him into further danger still?

This is a powerful production from director Tom Amen and Golden West College: a tale not only about moving on from grief, but of a father trying to do right by his simple son; of a man struggling with his faith; and the dynamics of belief in a small town desperate for heavenly guidance.

Justin Callisch’s performance as Buddy is breathtaking: a remarkable exploration of a young man who is both joyous in his simplicity and tragic in his inability to move forward from his deathly fear of water. There is incredibly moving interplay between him and Brodowski’s C.C., with palpable chemistry in the friendship between the two – and his interactions with Owens as his loving sister and Keister as his exasperated father are no less touching.

Even the little town and its residents are explored in depth; whether it’s the local young men Melvin Wilder (Tristan Lund) and Dewey Maples (William Logan), including the latter’s attraction to Darlene Henshaw; the interplay between husband and wife Basil and Luella Bennett; or the determination of belief and religious structure pursued by Norma and other persons of

Milwaukee is a tough luck baseball town

Although it appears that the Milwaukee Brewers are about to disappear from the sports limelight shortly, it's worth pointing out that baseball in Wisconsin's biggest city has a long and colorful – if not glorious – history.

In many ways, it was built on frustration and disappointment, but for different reasons than what's happening now in the National League Championship Series.

The original Brewers were a member of the charter

1901 season of the brand new American League, but moved to St. Louis the next season as the Browns, one of the losingest teams ever.

The next Milwaukee Brewers were a minor league AAA American Association from 1902 to 1952.

Big league baseball returned to town in 1953 with the transplanted Boston Braves. The Milwaukee Braves – with star slugger Hank Aaron – lasted until 1965 when they moved to Atlanta.

In the 1969 season, the second wave of expansion birthed the Seattle Pilots and San Diego Padres. The Pilots, playing in a cheesy minor league stadium, fled the Puget Sound after one more cheesy season left and landed in Milwaukee in 1970 as the Brewers.

The team moved again – metaphorically – when the franchise was swapped from the AL to the NL in an exchange which sent the Astros to the AL West. Another bit of historical trivia is that the Brewers are one of two teams – the Padres are the other – who have never won a World Series.

'Mighty Man' Lifts Bolts

Chargers face the Colts (5-1) at SoFi Sunday

By Dan Greenspan
Associated Press

It can be easy to dismiss Jim Harbaugh's frequently over-the-top praise for his players.

However when it comes to Chargers quarterback Justin Herbert, his head coach might be onto something after Herbert dragged Los Angeles' banged-up offense to a 29-27 win over the Miami Dolphins on Sunday.

"He's Hercules to me," Harbaugh said Sunday. "He's just a mighty man."

The Chargers (4-2) needed all of that strength from Herbert to escape the grasp of outside linebacker Jaelan Phillips and find wide receiver Ladd McConkey for a 42-yard catch-and-run that set up the go-ahead field goal with 5 seconds left.

His mix of moxie and athleticism has never been in doubt since the Chargers drafted Herbert sixth overall in 2020, but rarely has he had a complete supporting cast capable of allowing the Oregon product to reach his full potential. The start of this season saw Herbert play at a high level, boosted by first-round running back Omarion Hampton and the return of wide receiver Keenan Allen. Then the offensive line — already without left tackle Rashawn Slater after tearing his Achilles tendon in August — was gutted by injuries over the past three games, leaving Austin Deculus and Bobby Hart at the two tackle spots trying to protect Herbert against the Dolphins.

Under heavy pressure yet again at a critical moment, Herbert was able to come through with a potentially season-defining play.

Ohtani goes deep 3 times as Dodgers win NL title

It's not easy to decide what was the bigger feat: Shohei Ohtani's three home runs in the fourth and deciding game of the 2025 National League Championship Series, or the fact that the powerful Milwaukee Brewers were able to score only four runs in four games — one in each.

But, for the moment, the spotlight is on the former Angel who also pitched six innings of Friday's 5-1 triumph.

Ohtani hit solo home runs in the first, fourth and seventh innings, a history-making performance.

As the starting pitcher, he gave up just two hits. He struck out 10 batters and walked but three.

The Dodgers totaled nine hits. Will Smith followed Ohtani with two hits and one run scored. The sweep by the Dodgers gives them a chance to win a second consecutive World Series title. ## Argonauts fall 41-22 to Brea in Kappa game

Thursday night was a rough evening for local teams.

In a contest between the teams expected to be the top two in the Alpha League, Los Alamitos (now 8-0) defeated Edison (5-3) by 41-22.

The Chargers got off to a fast start, rolling up a 16-0 lead, but the rest of the game – played at SoFi Stadium in Inglewood – went to the Griffins.

A turning point was a blocked field goal attempt by Edison which would have given the green-and-gold a 19-14 lead was returned to the 2-yard line from where LA scored to take a lead they would not give up.

Edison's Sam Thomson passed for 311 yards and two scores.

Garden Grove, playing without star running back Quentin Pacelli, lost 41-22 to Brea Olinde in the Kappa League opener.

The Argonauts (2-6 overall) did get an outstanding performance from Calvin Keovphan, who passed for 145 yards, and three scores. He was intercepted twice.

Huntington Beach (71, 3-0) kept pace in first place in the Epsilon League with Crean Lutheran with a 21-14 win over Foothill. The Oilers and the Saints (8-0, 3-0) will likely meet for the title next Friday.

La Quinta (3-4-1, 0-3) dropped to the bottom of the Tango League with a 27-12 loss to Loara (2-6, 1-2).

Justin 'Hercules' Herbert was The Man vs. Miami

“Just a couple handful of guys really that could do that,” Harbaugh said. “On a mental level, I mean it’s an emotionally high-jacking thing to have that occur. You’ve got to keep your wits about you and still be able to be spun around and visualize where those — where there is at least somebody you can get the ball to and then having the presence of mind to relocate, re-lock back in, make an accurate throw, that’s just reserved for the best of the best.”

Harbaugh spent part of the flight back from Florida watching the final film in the “Mission Impossible” series, giving him another fictional hero to liken to Herbert.

“Like, man, Ethan Hunt, Justin Herbert, people don’t realize all the things they do,” Harbaugh said Monday, referring to Tom Cruise’s character in the eight films.

What’s working

With Hampton on injured reserve because of an ankle injury and Najee Harris out for the season because of a torn Achilles tendon, third-string RB Kimani Vidal broke out for a career-high 124 yards on 18 carries. That included a 38-yard rush, which would have been Vidal’s best single-game output by itself.

What needs help

The run defense struggled for the third straight week, allowing De’Von Achane to average 8.0 yards per carry en route to 128 yards and two touchdowns. The Chargers have given up 461 yards on the ground in the past three games after allowing a total of 284 yards in the season-opening three-game win streak.

Key number

401 — Allen has caught 401 passes from Herbert, making him the only player in NFL history with at least 400 receptions from two different QB; Allen had 520 grabs from Philip Rivers.

Next steps
